Albert Dorne — probably the greatest money-maker in the history of commercial art. At the height of his career, he began a full-time search for people who like to draw.

He's Looking for People Who Like to Draw

TODAY HUNDREDS of men and women who never thought they could be artists are working happily at easels and drawing boards, making pictures, and getting well paid for it. They all can thank Albert Dorne, a famous artist who devotes almost his full time to helping other people become artists.

Some of the people Dorne has helped

Don Smith of New Orleans is an example. A few years ago, he knew nothing about art, even doubted he had talent. Now he is an illustrator with a large advertising agency.

John Buskett is another. He was a pipefitter's helper in a big gas company. Today he still works for the same company, but as an artist in the advertising department, with a big increase in pay.

Harriet Kuzniewski was bored with an "ordinary" job before she heard of Albert Dorne. Today she does high-grade fashion illustration in New York.

With the right training, Wanda Pickulski gave up her typing job to become fashion artist for a local department store.

John Whitaker of Memphis was an airline clerk two years ago. Recently he won a national cartooning contest and was signed to do a newspaper comic strip.

Long before Albert Dorne started looking for people who like to draw, they came to him for advice and help. Since he alone could only help a few of these people he called together America's most successful artists—men like Norman Rockwell, Jon Whitcomb, Stevan Dohanos and Al Parker.

A Plan To Help Others

He said: "All over America, there are people who like to draw, who could be turned into good artists. Why can't we give these people the training they need—including all the trade secrets and know-how we've learned over the years? I'm suggesting a new kind of school—a home-study art school that would give talented people the best professional art training, no matter where they live."

The famous artists agreed. Taking time from their busy careers, they spent several years creating a remarkable series of art lessons covering every aspect of drawing and painting. They illustrated their lessons with over 5,000 "here's-how" illustrations. The lessons start from scratch and cover every skill a top artist needs. Finally, the famous artists developed a wonderful way to give each student personal correction and advice all through his training.

Albert Dorne is not surprised by the success of his students. "The art field is growing. We keep getting calls from all over the country, asking us for practical well-trained students who can step into full-time or part-time art jobs."

Famous Artists Talent Test

To find others with art talent worth developing, the famous artists created a 12-page talent test. Thousands paid $1 for this test, but now the School offers it free and will grade it free. If you show talent on the test, you will be eligible for training by the School. No obligation. Simply mail coupon. It might be your first step to an exciting, well-paid career in art.

A WEIGHTY PROBLEM

DOTTY stared unhappily at the chocolate cake. Her resolution had been so strong a moment before, but now face to face with the coconut icing, she sighed heavily at her crumbling resistance. Then, the knife was in her hand, helplessly cutting into the spongy softness. When she replaced the aluminum cover, she heard her mother call from the living room.

"Dorothy, are you at the cake again?"

Feeling even more guilty than before, Dotty snapped off the light and left the kitchen.

"Only a little piece," she answered. "Real mouse-size."

"Well, mouse-size or not," her mother called back, "that's your third piece this evening. You'll have to use more will power than that, my dear."

"Oh, brother!" Dotty mumbled. "Life is just absolute desolation!"

"What, dear?" her mother asked as Dotty sat down.

"I said it's good cake," Dotty answered.

"I believe that's what you said when you had the last piece," her mother smiled. Then added, "Remember, there are only two more weeks to the Junior prom."

Dotty swallowed the last piece of cake quickly, as if it were a glowing lump of coal. She didn't need her mother's reminder about the dance. She could think of nothing else, and the agonizing part of it all was that she had resolved to lose six pounds before this all-important event took place. Now, with it so near, not only had she failed to accomplish her objective, but a trip to the scale that morning showed a net increase of exactly one pound more!

She squirmed in her chair. "I have no self-control," she scolded. "I might just as well be a spineless jellyfish at the bottom of the ocean!" she shuddered. "What an absolute dismal failure I am!" she groaned in conclusion. With a burst of defiant anger, she ran to her room and frantically began to exercise. At intervals she ran to look in the mirror, hoping, as if by some wondrous magic, that the pounds would melt by this sudden spurt of energy and intent concentration.

When her mother came by a half hour later, Dotty was sprawled across the bed, panting and exhausted.

"Was all that activity coming from here?" her mother asked, glancing about the room. "You know, Dorothy," she continued, "to be successful in any program not only takes effort, but the right attitude. First, you must find a reason . . . an important one . . . then, when you have that, you'll find the discipline necessary to succeed."

"Reason!" Dotty repeated, when her mother had gone. "Golly, what better one could I want than to have a trim figure for the biggest dance of the year?"

After two more days of bitter struggle, Dotty called on her best friend, Alice Blake.

"Hi!" Dotty called when she entered her friend's room. Alice had a book perched atop her head and was parading back and forth across the floor. Alice longed to be a career model, and for a brief moment she paused to glance at Dotty.

"Hi," she answered, and then resumed her pacing. "Help yourself to a book," Alice added. "Nothing better for poise."

Dotty found a thick volume of history and adjusting it to a safe angle, she cautiously followed her friend.

"Have you a dress yet?" Alice asked after the seventh trip around.

"What dress?" Dotty questioned, her mind devoted solely in maintaining the book's precarious balance.

Alice stopped so quickly, that Dotty bumped her and the book crashed to the floor.

"For the dance! What else?" Alice explained.

"Oh," Dotty said, "golly, no! Have you?"

"Practically," Alice grinned. "Mother finally agreed I could get one this Saturday!"

"Say, that's swell," Dotty agreed. "I suppose I'll have to wear my same old velveteen!"

"Anyone ask you yet?" Alice inquired, dropping into a chair and tossing aside the book.

"No," Dotty confessed. "I was hoping Alan would, but I suppose he'll take Gail, instead. She has just about the most super figure in school."

Dotty was no longer listening as Alice chattered on about the dance. Dotty was thinking of Alan Smith whom she positively adored. Practically all the girls had a crush on him. But in the past few weeks, to her growing disappointment, Alan had been accompanying Gail between classes. Gail was so slim and willowy, and Dotty knew that unless she lost those seven pounds, there was little chance of Alan inviting her . . . or, for that matter, anyone!

So the days passed, and Dotty still found success elusive and beyond her grasp. Then with only three days left, the crushing blow came when she donned her blue velveteen.

"It's still much too tight," her mother said through a mouthful of pins. "Take it off, dear, and I'll open the seams as much as I can."

It was hopeless, Dotty confessed to Alice a half-hour later in the candy store. She gave a long sigh and stared dejectedly into her strawberry float. "If I were a man," she said, "I'd simply join the Foreign Legion and bury my sorrows forever."

"Golly," Alice sympathized, drawing a long sip from her soda. "You do sound beat."

"Well, anything would be better than going to the dance in my skimpy old velveteen and no one to dance with!"

"Didn't Bill Evers ask you?" Alice inquired, after another long, thoughtful sip.

"I told you I refused," Dotty answered, impatiently.

"That was silly," Alice replied.

"I know, but I guess I couldn't stop hoping." She gave a final sip on her straw, twirling it against the bottom.

"Hey!" Alice exclaimed, suddenly. "There's your dream-boat now!"

Dotty turned, and when she saw Alan walking straight for her, she could hardly gulp down the remaining ice cream.

"Hi!" she whispered when he reached their booth.

"Greetings," Alan replied. "Okay if I join you?"

Dotty was so overwhelmed she couldn't speak. Alice gave her a quizzical stare, then turning to Alan, she answered quickly.

"Of course, Alan; we'd be glad to have you." Then she said to Dotty, "Aren't we?"

Dotty nodded, hopefully. Alan grinned and slid in beside her. "Sure now it's okay?" he repeated. "I mean, are you expecting anyone?"

"Oh, no!" Dotty exclaimed, finding her voice at last. Then she added, "Are you?"

"Oh, I told Phil Stewart I'd meet him. Hope you don't mind!"

"No, that's swell," Alice replied. "You know, Phil's taking me to the Prom.

"And I suppose you're taking Gail!" Dotty blurted out in admission of her own defeat.

"Nothing doing!" Alan said. There was a positive tone to his voice. "That gal's so inflated with her own vanity, it's enough to make a guy sick."

Both girls started to giggle. "But she's so slender and pretty," Dotty added with careful emphasis.

"That's the trouble," Alan replied. "She's a peacock and expects every guy at school to wait on her. But not me!" Then turning to Dotty he gave her a thoughtful look. "Are you already dated, Dotty, or could you still go to the prom with me?"

Dotty couldn't believe her ears, but the words rang like silver chimes! "Thank you for asking," she answered. "I haven't promised anyone yet, and I'd be pleased to go with you, Alan!"

"Swell," Alan replied. "Would you like anything? A coke, or maybe a soda?"

Dotty shook her head, emphatically. "No, thanks," she said. "I was just telling Alice that I don't really care much for sweets, anymore."

She looked Alice directly in the eye. The words had come sincerely . . . because this was how she now felt! Tomorrow she would go to the library and really learn about dieting, and this time she would succeed. Her mother had been right. She would no longer find it difficult . . . she had found her important reason, at last!

IT'S ONLY DULL WHEN YOU'RE AROUND, DARLING!

I GUESS I'M EXPECTED TO ASK, SO I WILL! WHAT WERE YOU SAYING ABOUT ME?

WELL, SERIOUSLY, HEDY... WE WERE WONDERING WHY ANYONE AS WEALTHY AS YOU IS SO STINGY!

WEALTHY? HA! THAT'S A LAUGH! AFTER THIS WEEK, WE'LL PROBABLY BE BROKE!
